

Breaking Down Silos: Cross Functional Collaboration

Remember the last problem you were trying to solve. Did you have everything you needed to solve the problem, or did you need help and/or information from others? More times than not the answer will be Yes, I needed help and/or information from others. Cross functional collaboration is where people from different areas of functional expertise come together to accomplish goals. Organizations that have strong cross functional collaboration are more successful in accomplishing goals. In this workshop, you will learn how to break down barriers and to build a collaborative cross functional work environment. Workshop length and content can be customized to meet your training needs.
